RESTAURANT CASE STUDY

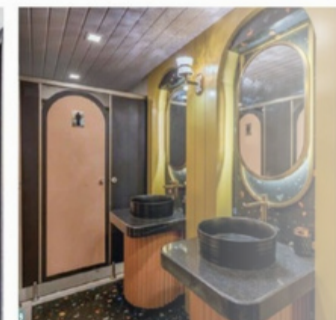

ART PARTY

The design keeps one on their toes as the designer further brings the Asian essence into the air. Inspired by the Japanese Kaizen idea, the bar features hanging bamboo lights gently swaying overhead, casting a warm and inviting glow that integrates with the overall design. Further, to achieve different gradients in design, iron rods were cut, painted and installed with lights for a brassy and opulent feel. The leftover rods were reused in the seating panels which reduced wastage. A small bench made of granite is placed across the bar which is topped with a pop-out umbrella adorned with lights. The umbrellas use a dominant midnight blue shade that adds to the Asian theme. To infuse a play of textures, the team incorporated glow-in-the-dark tables made of concrete and terrazzo which not only provided a rough and edgy look but also evoked a high-design art.

The team of Danza Dei Design has tried to incorporate sustainability by collaborating with local artists and minimising waste in design. A wall beside the bar is adorned with clay dishes that replicate the Tokyo art. The art was created on-site with various artists and 3D paints to make a stunning feature in the bar. Moreover, an interesting element of the bar is the stools which are famous for the way they were made. They feature blue upholstered seating with a brass finish that adds to the theme. The backs of the stools are adorned with coasters of tiger and tigress enjoying drinks with Indonesian caps reflecting the Asian culture.

RAISING THE COLOUR BAR

As the whole design follows an Asian-funk theme, the menu and other elements also showcase hints of the same. The menu is designed with the existing colour palette of the bar where red creates a bold effect along with deep midnight blue which is dominant with hints of maroon. A touch of yellow and ochre is added for aesthetics along with the graphics of a tiger and tigress having drinks. Every element in the design enchants the Asian theme curating a fun and free-spirited environment.

The Laughing Tiger turns every encounter into an indelible work of art. Its design showcases the seamless blend of technical mastery and artistic finesse, where craftsmanship narrates a tale, and each experience becomes an enduring narrative. ■
